WEATHER OBSERVATIONS:

Rain or snow from the Ohio and over Mississippi valleys and the lake region to the middle Atlantic states. New England has resulted from the northeastern storm which has reached the north Atlantic coast, and from the moderate southern depression which is now over the east gulf coast. Another storm is approaching from western Washington and is causing rain or snow on the north Pacific coast and the northern Rocky mountain plateau. High pressures and cold weather prevail from the Pacific slope to the central valleys, with zero temperatures from the interior of Western Canada southward to Kansas and Iowa. Freezing weather extends almost to the coast of Texas.
